Innovative teaching methods for preschool teachers

1st – 7th March 2026

The mobility provided me with a valuable opportunity to explore innovative approaches to preschool education, including creativity, social and emotional learning, outdoor learning, play, and project-based learning. I particularly valued the opportunity to exchange experiences with teachers from different countries. Learning about their approaches to preschool education, play, child development, and the different educational contexts in which they work broadened my perspective and gave me ideas that I can take into my own professional practice.

The course also strengthened my understanding of project-based learning and provided practical ideas, including the use of ICT tools to create engaging learning activities. As I attended the mobility together with two teachers from a school I support, the experience also gave us an opportunity to get to know each other outside our usual professional roles. This helped strengthen our relationship and encouraged a closer and more collaborative working relationship with the school.

Overall, the mobility was a valuable professional experience that allowed me to learn from colleagues across Europe, reflect on my own practice, and return with new ideas and perspectives that I can apply in my work.
